Tuber Inspection and Disease Identification Course

A familiarity with common faults and the ability to accurately identify potato diseases and defects are essential skills for anyone working within the potato supply chain.

This course provides a unique opportunity to examine physical specimens and gain a practical understanding of the key requirements of the Seed Potato Classification Scheme.

Whether you have never received formal training in disease and defect scoring, or your identification skills need a refresher, this course is designed to build confidence and improve accuracy in potato inspection.

Attendance costs £575 + VAT per delegate and includes lunch, refreshments and a comprehensive course information pack.
